AMCSI Highlights Multiple Ways to Give Back and Support the Global Arthrogryposis Community

From volunteering and monthly donations to workplace giving, community fundraisers, and legacy gifts, Arthrogryposis Multiplex Congenita Support, Inc. offers meaningful ways for individuals and organizations to make a difference.

SPARTANBURG, SC | October 29, 2026 — Arthrogryposis Multiplex Congenita Support, Inc. (AMCSI), a nationally recognized 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization serving individuals and families affected by Arthrogryposis Multiplex Congenita (AMC), is encouraging supporters to explore its comprehensive Ways to Give resource, highlighting opportunities to contribute through financial gifts, volunteer service, workplace programs, community fundraising, and planned giving.

For more than two decades, AMCSI has provided educational resources, family support, grants, scholarships, awareness initiatives, and opportunities for individuals living with AMC to connect with others who share similar experiences.

These programs are made possible through the generosity of donors, volunteers, members, families, businesses, and community supporters.

Recognizing that everyone has different resources, abilities, and opportunities to contribute, AMCSI's Ways to Give initiative highlights how acts of generosity, both large and small, can support its mission and help sustain programs serving the AMC community worldwide.

More Than a Donation: Find Your Way to Give

AMCSI offers several opportunities for individuals, families, businesses, and organizations to become involved.

Volunteer Your Time. Multiply Your Impact.

Giving back does not always require a financial contribution. Volunteers can share their time, professional skills, and talents to support AMCSI's programs, fundraising efforts, awareness initiatives, and community activities.

Many employers provide donations to nonprofit organizations based on their employees' volunteer hours.

Company Match: Multiply Your Contribution

Many employers offer charitable matching gift programs that can double, or sometimes increase further, an employee's donation to an eligible nonprofit organization.

AMCSI encourages supporters to check with their human resources or corporate giving departments to determine whether their employers offer matching contributions.

Employer Giving in Action: A Message from AMCSI's President

AMCSI President Tracey shares a firsthand example of how employer-sponsored giving programs can provide additional support to the organization.

> "My oldest brother is a huge supporter of AMCSI and takes advantage of his employer providing money to nonprofits that their employees support. He has volunteered at the AMCSI conference and his employer donated $20 for every hour he volunteered with AMCSI back to AMCSI. Not only did AMCSI get the benefit of his help at conference, we then received money to put toward programming.
> In other years he has used this money from his company by simply donating money and his company then matched the donation. His company uses Benevity and taking advantage of both the dollars for doer's program and the matching program makes the process very easy. It took just minutes to request money for both programs."

Conference Scholarships: Providing eligible individuals and families with opportunities to attend AMCSI's annual conference.

Educational Scholarships: Supporting educational opportunities for individuals living with AMC.

Research Grants: Supporting research and advancing knowledge about arthrogryposis.

Family and Community Support: Providing resources for newly diagnosed families, local gatherings, bereavement assistance, and educational outreach.

Annual AMCSI Conference: Bringing individuals, families, medical professionals, and community members together for education, networking, adaptive recreation, and shared experiences.

These initiatives reflect AMCSI's continued commitment to providing practical resources, strengthening community connections, and expanding access to support for individuals and families living with AMC.

Every Contribution Has a Purpose

Whether someone volunteers for a few hours, contributes a small amount each month, organizes a local fundraiser, or includes AMCSI in their long-term charitable plans, every contribution plays a role in supporting the organization's work.

AMCSI encourages individuals, families, employers, and community organizations to explore the available opportunities and select the giving method that best fits their interests and circumstances.
